Question 1. The following sentence, though bizarre and deliberately confusing, is actually grammatically correct:

“The weasel that a boy that startles the cat thinks loves smiles eats.”

Answer the following questions. In some cases, the answers may be “nobody in this sentence” or “nothing in this sentence”.

1. What is the subject of this sentence? (Give a single-word answer.)

2. How many verbs are in the sentence?

3. Who startles whom or what?

4. Who thinks what?

5. Who loves whom or what?

6. Who smiles?

7. Who eats whom or what?